Did I Just Get Scammed?!? : r/USPS - Reddit

USPS sends both, when I was a Senior Engineer for a fulfillment company our office received an email followed up with a phone call from the USPS asking us to stop what I was doing. At one point I realized it was faster to ask for email updates then query a few hundred thousand packages every hour.

Can someone who works at USPS explain to me what the hell is ... - Reddit

FedEx & UPS only delivers it to USPS on the last leg of the journey iirc. So for me, usually FedEx or UPS has it almost the entire time before it goes to my local USPS office to deliver my package.

Wow completely NOT what your post is about but thanks for introducing me to "informed delivery"!! I've always wondered how you guys seem to know when you have a package coming and just figured the app sent an email or something. Just signed up on the USPS website!! So cool! Thanks!!!

What does it mean when USPS tracking says "Label created ... - Reddit

USPS is a mess right now and it's hardly fair to count something as lost after 4 days especially because it's an international shipment. if it still says that at 14 days, that would be different.

Confused about "Enhanced Click N Ship" and Ground Advantage : r/USPS

Is enhanced ClickNShip only for business customers? I occasionally ship personal packages from home and would like to use Click N Ship. I have a login for Informed Delivery and my account seems to have Click N Ship available but the information is confusing and ambiguous as to whether it is business-use only.
