Difference between "has started" and "is started"

You are correct in understanding that has started and is started mean the same thing here. The main point is that while the bargaining is in progress, the other intermediaries must wait. Has started makes that just a tiny bit clearer, for reasons that the answers below try to explain. (It's because the present perfect means "even though the action happened in the past, the result is still in ...

What is the correct article before "/s/ sound"?

There's not really a single word that [floppy wrist gesture] replaces, so you can't apply the starts-with-a-vowel rule, but that's OK because it's switching between spoken English and a gesture. If you write/say: There is a /s/ in the word "city" You're briefly switching from English orthography to IPA orthography.

word request - English Language Learners Stack Exchange

Is there a word or expression for when somebody assumes you hold a certain view or opinion - and then starts to argue against this opinion that you didn't even express? Thank you; Update: Example

Appropriate Time of Greeting 'Good Evening'

To a large extent the start of 'evening' is a matter of opinion or convention. The Oxford Dictionaries say that it 'usually' starts at 'about' 6 PM. Note the lack of a definite rule. Evening NOUN 1 The period of time at the end of the day, usually from about 6 p.m. to bedtime. it was seven o'clock in the evening Evening (Lexico) Cambridge does not provide a time: the part of the day between ...

definite article - The class starts at noon. vs Class starts at noon ...

Wedding starts at two o'clock; reception begins at three-thirty. Train leaves at noon. Bus leaves at one. I would understand those sentences – especially in a context like a brief email – but I think that determiners might make the sentences sound a bit more smooth: The wedding starts at two o'clock; our reception begins at three-thirty.

starting / ending - English Language Learners Stack Exchange

The words starting / ending [in / on / with some date] introduce a "participle adjectival clause" modifying the preceding noun (practice / tour / year / ...). Generally speaking, you could replace those participles with which starts / which ends.

word request - How do you describe it when someone suddenly starts to ...

How do you describe it when someone suddenly starts to do something with great enthusiasm, not necessarily displaying rational thinking? I need a verb that precedes a more specific infinitive or gerund.
