

intended for pleasure pdf

AI generated article from Bing intended to / intended for - WordReference Forums

Hi all! First, I have a straight question: What's the difference between intended for and intended to? I don't have a clear idea about the differences, or the contexts where they can be properly applied to. I have to write a sentence and I don't know what to choose. The sentence is as...

no pun intended - WordReference Forums

Con respecto a lo de no pun intended, yo creo que decir que no va con segundas quiere decir que hay un segundo significado en esa frase dependiendo del contexto, pero ese segundo significado no tiene por qué ser negativo, sino más bien (creo yo), algo que pueda dar lugar a malentendidos, ya sean cosas negativas, dobles sentidos jocosos, etc ...

intend, intent, intended | WordReference Forums

Your sentences above are correct, but intent in terms of being intent on doing something is not the same word as "intent," a noun, meaning something that is intended. I cannot think of any natural use of "to be intended," which means, to my mind, "intended to intend," which doesn't work.

Intend on / intend to - WordReference Forums

I just looked at the Cambridge English dictionary online and there is no mention of 'intend on', which suggests that 'intend to' (which is in there) is the better choice for clarity. Hope this helps Would you use this with a gerund, however? "The company intended to relocating its factories" sounds plainly wrong, to my ear.

he is meant/ supposed/ intended to... | WordReference Forums

Intended probably only works if it's obvious who's doing the intending. But it's unreasonable, in my view, to expect us to comment on a whole list of possible combinations of basically the same sentence.

Intended vs intentionally - WordReference Forums

If we say somebody intended to do something it is almost always the case that they didn't actually do it. If somebody did something that they meant to do the word we use is "intentional" .

What are you/do you intended/intend to do? -

WordReference Forums

Hello everyone,,, I wonder if there are any differences between them. / Could anyone help me?
Thanks

intended to leave vs intended for use - WordReference Forums

The expression intended for emergency use only, is a past participle clause modifying fund. Semantically, it is similar to the relative clause in A fund that is intended for emergency use only.

intended to go, intended to have gone, had intended to go

What are the differences between the following three sentences? 1) He intended to go to the Galapagos. 2) He intended to have gone to the Galapagos. 3) He had intended to go to the Galapagos. I think those sentences are very confusing!

in the spirit in which it was intended (usage) - WordReference Forums

The problem is that I don't understand what in the spirit in which it was intended really means. I've come up with this example as I'm trying to understand the meaning of this expression.