

lytic vs lysogenic pathway

AI generated article from Bing

"Do steroids cause cataracts?" - Zocdoc Answers

These steroid injections tend to stay in the joint and do not cause many body wide effects, especially if only given a few times per joint. Thus I would find it shocking that steroid infections into joints could be the cause of your eye problems. People that develop steroid induced cataracts are generally people that have consumed steroid pills for many years treating different autoimmune ...

"What are degenerative changes?" - Zocdoc Answers

The best test for detecting degenerative changes is an MRI, though DDD can be suggested by a simple x-ray. The MRI shows more detail and can possibly reveal another cause for you back pain. Degenerative disc disease is treated first with physical therapy and and non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs. Some patients report improvement in symptoms with chiropractic manipulations, but this is not ...

Why do I sometimes get these odd hallucinations or blind spots in one ...

Question By hallucinations, I mean it's like I can't see or focus on anything like on the right side of my right eye, or left side of my left eye, and it's like there's nothing there, but yet there is, like these bright circles filled with spirals and multicolored tessellated triangles and shapes, and it messes me up when I'm trying to read or do anything, and I need to lay or sit down until ...

"Are clitoris lumps a sign of an STD?" - Zocdoc Answers

Answer There are several potential causes of small lumps around the clitoris that should be evaluated by a doctor. The first are genital warts, which are an infection caused by the human papilloma virus. They usually look like irregular, soft, fleshy protrusions of skin on a wide base.

Is Xanax addictive? | Zocdoc Answers

Answer Xanax (generic name alprazolam) is one of several different medications in the class of medications known as benzodiazepines. These medications are frequently used to treat anxiety disorders, and they also have some use in treating insomnia, muscles spasms, and a few other conditions. When used regularly, the benzodiazepines can definitely be addictive and create dependence.

When will the red spot in my eye go away? | Zocdoc Answers

I got clunked in the eye and now there is a red spot in the white part of my eye. It looks like blood and I think that it is blood. When will this go away? Do i have to have it treated or will it go away on its own?

What is a cyst? | Zocdoc Answers

Answer A cyst is a collection of material that is completely lined with a covering, something like a shell, all the way around. Treatment of these often involves more than just removing the contents of whatever is infected and bothering you (causing the area to be red and angry looking, and usually causing pain or itching), and instead involves complete removal of all of the lining of whatever ...

"Why am I having trouble swallowing?" - Zocdoc Answers

Lately I am having trouble swallowing. It feels like my throat tightens up and just doesn't want to work right. Any cause for this? I don't know how to stop it and it has me thinking a lot about what's wrong.

"Why is my foot turning purple?" - Zocdoc Answers

Question My foot got jammed between some stuff at work. Hurt pretty bad but doesn't hurt now. But it is turning purple. Doesn't look like a bruise though, it is happening in the whole foot almost. Is it still just a bruise? Something that needs treatment?

Can lower abdominal pain be constipation? | Zocdoc Answers

This can lead to a sensation of bloating, fullness, and lower crampy or dull, aching abdominal pain. In addition to taking lots of fiber and water, an over the counter laxative such as Miralax might be needed. If this does not work, you will need to see a doctor for more definitive treatment. Other causes of lower abdominal pain, which seem less likely in your case given the circumstances ...