ELI5: what is the difference between British intelligence MI5 and MI6?

MI6 is officially the Secret Intelligence Service (SIS could, I think, be too easily confused with the S A S) and is responsible for foreign intelligence, which is to say spying on other countries. The easy comparison to make is that MI5 is akin to the FBI, while MI6 is more of a CIA.

MI5 is for internal stuff and MI6 is for external. MI-5 are spy-catchers at home and MI-6 are spies abroad. Spooks (The BBC show) is MI-5, James Bond is MI-6 You may think of it as somewhat (but not really) like the division between the FBI and CIA in the US when it comes to intelligence.

MI5/MI6/GCHQ salaries - really that bad? : r/AskUK - Reddit

MI5/MI6/GCHQ salaries - really that bad? The website shows the salary pay, and it looks fairly good. I was just wondering because I've seen a few posts complaining about how low the salary pay is; I even saw a Redditor comment that they get paid less than the police. Considering how much the police get paid, that's pretty low. Archived post.

Why are salaries in MI5/MI6/GCHQ so laughably low? - Reddit

In general, especially for skilled jobs, it's the case that public sector jobs will pay less than the private sector but other things like pensions and leave might be much more generous. Take into account these things and they look much more competitive. These organisations just won't have the budget to pay loads more.

Whats the difference between MI5 and MI6? : r/KillingEve - Reddit

Kinda like FBI vs CIA, except that as far as I understand MI6 is less clandestine than CIA. CIA historically has had a lot of shit going on that's "of the books", while MI6 seems a tad more controlled with a more tangible command structure.

MI5 gathers information, analyses it, and works with the police and other agencies to prevent things like terrorist attacks and espionage. MI6 is more like the "international spy agency".

MI5 is responsible for domestic intelligence and security. This could be compared to the FBI in the states MI6 is responsible for foreign intelligence, like the CIA.
