Cushings Disease - Maltese Dogs Forum : Spoiled Maltese Forums

In all my research on Cushings disease I came to the conclusion that Lisi probably has Cushings as well! So much in her history would validate that---and I think it came during her 2nd hospital stay for cancer surgery because it was physically & emotionally very stressful for her & she came...

Little Pup Not eating | Maltese Dogs Forum : Spoiled Maltese Forums

A Maltese puppy usually will not get most of their baby teeth in until 12-16 weeks. This is 1-2 MONTHS after a full breed puppy has most of their baby teeth. A Maltese puppy really does not start learning their doggy social graces until around 8 weeks. Which is why so many of us push for these puppies to stay with their litter until 12 weeks.

What to do for Itchy Skin? - Maltese Dogs Forum

A good remedy for itchy skin is Epsoms salts in there water bowl. I have a Maltese and a Papillion and put approx 1/4 tsp of epsoms salts well mixed into there water when I refresh the water bowl. Make sure you wash the bowl well before refilling because a buildup of it could give them the runs.

Does Your Maltese Clean Himself

Does anyone else's maltese do this regular self grooming? Coco always seems to be taking inventory of herself to make sure that she is nice and clean. When we go on walks and her fur accidentally picks up something on the ground (such as a leaf) she will stop and get the leaf out.

teeth questions | Maltese Dogs Forum : Spoiled Maltese Forums

Maltese and toy dogs in general are notorious for having retained baby teeth. I would get her spayed ASAP and any remaining baby teeth removed.
