

militarism world war 1 definition

AI generated article from Bing

To what extent did militarism contribute to the start of World War II ...

Quick answer: Militarism significantly contributed to the start of World War II, particularly in Germany, Japan, and Italy. Germany, under Hitler, rebuilt its military, citing the Treaty of ...

How did the arms race contribute to the onset of World War I ...

Militarism was a factor in the outbreak of World War I. Another factor was entangling alliances. There were two, competing alliances prior to World War I.

Why is militarism beneficial for the USA? - eNotes.com

Quick answer: Militarism can benefit the USA by enhancing its global influence and economic strength. A strong military deters other countries, aligning them with American interests. Domestically ...

Compare Japanese militarists with European fascists.

Quick answer: Japanese militarists and European fascists shared similarities, such as a desire for national unity and aggressive foreign policy, and a dislike for democracy. However, differences ...

History (General) Questions and Answers - eNotes.com

The general causes of war include imperialism, nationalism, militarism, economic motives, and political or ideological differences. Imperialism involves the desire for land and resources, while...

Why did militarism arise in Japan in the 1930s? - eNotes.com

Quick answer: Militarism in Japan during the 1930s arose from a combination of historical, economic, and geopolitical factors. The Meiji Restoration initiated Japan's modernization and military ...

Why was Germany so aggressive in taking over Europe? - eNotes.com

The striking early success of victories in the Sudetenland and Austria demonstrated to Hitler and his people that the German Empire could be restored through militarism and conquest.

The Kingdom of God Is Within You Summary - eNotes.com

The Tyranny of Militarism A significant portion of Tolstoy's work is dedicated to denouncing militarism and the horrors of war.

What is the meaning of the "Destroy This Mad Brute" photo from World ...

The "Destroy This Mad Brute" photo is World War I propaganda designed to encourage men to enlist in the U.S. Army. Created by Harry Ryle Hopps in 1917, it depicts a gorilla labeled "militarism ...

How did imperialism contribute to the causes of both world wars ...

This alarmed Britain, the leading naval superpower in the world, into enlarging its battleship fleet, thus creating an arms race and increasing militarism in both countries.