I got a handicap ticket but I have a handicap placard - Officer.com

Hi, I recently recieved a handicap parking ticket for 275 dollars for not properly displaying my placard. I do understand that the officer was just doing his job (although if he had taken ONE second to look inside my car it was clearly there), but when i approached him with my handicap placard he refused to do anything. He then gave me incorrect information and told me i had to drive 35 miles ...

Downing of a Duck #1 - Officer.com

Downing of a Duck #3 The procedure for releasing officers from the security area at the joint is done like this: The sergeant at the control room looks at everyone wanting into the sallyport (a sallyport is a holding area in between two locked steel doors). When he's satisfied he's only releasing staff, he pushes a button which opens the first of two electronically controlled doors ...

hand guns in the academy?? - Officer.com

In KCMO, the department issue each new officer a weapon (Glock 22) and the officer pays for the weapon after graduating from the academy and being on the job for six months. Half way through the academy, the cadets will be taking their weapons home at night and bring them back to the academy next day and lock it in their locker.

Few questions on FHP Auxiliary - Officer.com

Do you know if becoming an auxiliary gets you fully certified as a law enforcement officer? Would you become certified for this? Also I've been looking around for the answer to this question do auxiliaries get take home uniform and equipment or do they just leave it in a locker or something when they are going home?
