Received a random package that we did not order, it had our ... - Reddit

We just received a package via USPS that is a random, small, blue blanket. We did not order this item but somehow my wife and I's correct name is on the destination. The return address is listed as "Only for Return" and the address line has "Not Seller Address" in parentheses.

Can someone who works at USPS explain to me what the hell is ... - Reddit

Whenever this happens to me, it's because it's being dropped shipped or shipped by someone trying to lie about the country of origin in an online listing. If you go to the actual USPS website, you can see who the shipping partner is.

Did I Just Get Scammed?!? : r/USPS - Reddit

USPS sends both, when I was a Senior Engineer for a fulfillment company our office received an email followed up with a phone call from the USPS asking us to stop what I was doing. At one point I realized it was faster to ask for email updates then query a few hundred thousand packages every hour.
