What does "culture" mean to you? : r/SameGrassButGreener - Reddit

Culture to me means that a lot of people on the bus are speaking foreign languages and there's a high rate of immigration. I don't necessarily mean restaurants but like dollar stores and places that sell international groceries. Street vending and fusion restaurants such as Chinese Fried Chicken and The Halal Guys.

Console Commands for culture traditions : r/CrusaderKings - Reddit

When creating my kingdom, I made sure to have a philosopher culture, just before I was about to finally unlock the traditions, I got a crash, loaded the game with autosave because I was playing in ironman mode, when I unlocked the traditions, it turned out to be different, you can imagine my nervousness after several hours of creating your ideal country. I decided to use commands to fix it ...

Faster ways to convert culture? : r/CrusaderKings - Reddit

Is there any faster way to convert large amount of counties culture quickly. Even low development counties can take years to flip individually even by really high level stewards. To convert a lot of counties would take forever using this method. I know there's some cheese with outremer culture but other than that how do you do it.

South Korean car culture : r/cars - Reddit

Car culture here used to look more conservative until F&F came out. I look at videos of American traffic in the 1980s and 1990s and tackily modded cars or cars in crazy colors were nowhere to be seen.

Learning Cell Culture : r/biotech - Reddit

Learning Cell Culture I never had the opportunity to do cell culture as an undergraduate and I noticed how prevalent it is in jobs throughout the industry. Having finished my undergrad a few years ago, are there any suggestions for how to learn/gain experience with cell culturing?

Explain to me what Culture is : r/writing - Reddit

Culture is the general attitudes, opinions, and tastes of a nation, or large groups within that nation, what aspects of life they value most, what motivates their choices. Elves are typically about nature and purity. Dwarves are typically about wealth and industry. Men are typically about war and conquest, or whatever. It's their culture.
