Like onomatopoeia, but visual - English Language & Usage Stack Exchange

The word phenomime can be used for words that act like onomatopoeia (also known as phonomimes) for non-auditory sensory stimuli (the other four senses). They are quite common in Japanese, which also has psychomimes (words that act like onomatopoeia for emotions, thought processes, states of mind). Phonomimes use word sounds to represent auditory stimuli, such as a bark, a meow, or a honk ...

single word requests - "Visualized" equivalent adjective for audio ...

Funny - I had the same thought, typed "the audible equivalent of visualize" and came across this page. Remarkable to know others are having the same obscure thoughts as you - gotta love google!! I vote for "audiolize". It's the easiest to say, the most mellifluous (like that word). I'm a guitarist and was looking for a word to describe what i do when improvising - sometimes it's a visual ...

What is an adjective that describes something very visually crowded or busy? Cacophonous is perfect, but it describes sound.

meaning - "Visual imperfection" and "cosmetic flaw" in description of ...

These terms generally mean that the problem with the object is purely esthetic, it shouldn't have any significant effect on the function that the product is intended to perform. Of course, if the purpose of the product includes visual appeal, there's some overlap. For instance, clothing is usually intended to look good, and it won't look as good if it has a cosmetic flaw. But the flaw shouldn't ...

Term for graphical representation of sound

The visual display of a sound wave can take many forms. You ask what the " graphical representation of a sound " is called, and you show an example. There are different terms for different forms of graphical representations of sound, for example sonogram, (audio)spectrogram, waveform, (audio) oscillogram. Which one to use is a technical matter. One form is usually called a sonogram, or ...

etymology - Why aren't optical illusions called visual illusions ...

It seems to me that "optical" relates more to the mechanics of light and vision, whereas "visual" is a much broader term. For example, hallucinations are classed as "visual" or "auditory", rather ...
