

what is a vizier in ancient egypt

AI generated article from Bing

---

Vizier - Wikipedia

In Ganjifa cards, the vizier is a face card holding the second-highest rank in a suit, after the king. In Mamluk Kanjifa, there are two vizier ranks: the first vizier (na'ib malik), and the second vizier (na'ib thani).

Vizier | Ancient Egyptian & Islamic Officials | Britannica

vizier, originally the chief minister or representative of the 'Abbāsid caliphs and later a high administrative officer in various Muslim countries, among Arabs, Persians, Turks, Mongols, and other eastern peoples.

VIZIER Definition & Meaning - Merriam-Webster

The meaning of VIZIER is a high executive officer of various Muslim countries and especially of the Ottoman Empire.

Ancient Egyptian Vizier - World History Encyclopedia

The vizier was not simply a counselor or advisor to the king but was the administrative head of the government who implemented the king's policies and arranged for the various governmental departments to carry these out.

The Vizier in Ancient Egypt

When a pharaoh was very young or was weak or otherwise incapacitated, it was the vizier who cohesively held the country together. Often, a vizier would maintain his office during the reign of several pharaohs, unless a pharaoh wanted to appoint his own vizier rather than use that of his predecessor.

vizier - Wiktionary, the free dictionary

Noun vizier m (plural viziers or vizieren, diminutive viziertje n) a high-ranking official or minister in an Islamic government, especially in the Ottoman Empire

The Viziers of Ancient Egypt: Definition, Role, and Facts

The Vizier (tjaty or djat) held the highest office in Ancient Egypt after the Pharaoh, acting as the kingdom's chief administrator, judge, and policy enforcer. The office existed from the early Pharaonic period (c. 3150 BCE) and evolved to become a cornerstone of Egyptian governance.